Unit aim(s)	This unit is all about how the learner’s behaviour affects the way customers see them. Some customers expect different things from the service they offer but there are basic acceptable standards of behaviour and attitudes that they need to achieve. Their managers and supervisors also expect them to meet those standards. When they create the right impression and show a positive attitude they reduce the risk of somebody being upset or offended by the way they deal with them. This unit is appropriate for learners who have done jobs where they had limited contact with customers, are experiencing customer service work for the first time or are just starting their first job. If a learner has already successfully done full or part-time work dealing directly with customers, this may not be the right unit for them and they should consider the unit - “Maintain a positive and customer-friendly attitude”.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Excellent customer service is provided by people who are good with people. The learner's behaviour affects the impression that customers have of the service they are receiving. This Unit is about communicating with the customers and giving a positive impression whenever dealing with a customer. By doing this the learner can create a positive impression of the organisation and the customer service it provides. All of us enjoy the experience of good customer service if we feel that the person serving us really wants to create the right impression, responds to us and gives us good information. Every detail of the learners' behaviour counts when dealing with a customer.

Unit aim(s)	Services or products are continually changing in organisations to keep up with customers' expectations. By offering new or improved services or products the organisation can increase customer satisfaction. Many organisations must promote these to be able to survive in a competitive world. However, it is equally important for organisations that are not in competition with others to encourage their customers to try new services or products. This unit is about the learners' need to keep pace with new developments and to encourage customers to take an interest in them. Customers expect more and more services or products to be offered to meet their own growing expectations. They need to be made aware of what is available from the organisation. Because of this everybody offering services or products needs to play a part in making customers aware of what is available. Learners should not choose this unit if their organisation does not want them to suggest additional services or products to customers.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	The learner and their organisation need information about their customers and their behaviour to answer customer questions and to respond to customer requests. Information about customers is also used by the organisation to develop its customer service. Some customer information is collected from customers. Other customer information is collected through information systems and equipment that make records of service delivery. In either case the learner must collect information, retrieve it and supply it when needed. Good customer information provides a sound basis for all customer service transactions. The quality of the customer information depends heavily on the skills and attention to detail of the person dealing with the information.

Unit aim(s)	The learner may work in an organisation that has a carefully defined brand and vision that includes a specific service offer and promise to their customers. Often, much work has taken place to develop these, and they influence what the customer expects. By promoting the brand, the organisation is making a promise to their customers about what they can expect. Customer satisfaction is unlikely to be achieved if their customer's experience does not match their expectations of that promise. Even in organisations without a strong brand image, customers often have firm expectations. This unit is about the way the learner's work supports the branding of their services or products. It covers what they must do to make sure that they deliver the promise that the customer has come to expect. It also covers how the learner can avoid giving their customer an experience that is significantly different from the one offered in the promise.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Research has shown that customer satisfaction increases if customers feel that they have been treated in a way that recognises their own personal needs. When they are delivering customer service learners often deal with a large number of customers who seem to be the same, but it is important to remember that each customer is an individual. Anything the learner can do to make each customer feel that they have had their complete attention and have been dealt with personally increases their sense of satisfaction. This unit is about how the learner can help their customers feel that they have experienced service that focuses on them as an individual. When the learner works with a customer they need to give the impression that it is on a 'one to one' basis, that they care what happens to their customer and that they respect their customer as an individual.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	When the learner's customer feels that they have taken special care to give them good service and have done something more than they expect, they are likely to enjoy a better customer service experience. Opportunities to add this extra value to the customer's experience depend on the learner spotting what they will particularly appreciate. Often they can offer this little extra when sorting out a difficulty or problem. Whatever special service the learner gives when they "go the extra mile" must be within their own authority or with the authority of an appropriate colleague. It must also take account of the organisation's service offer and all the relevant procedures and regulations. As customers, we all enjoy and remember it when somebody has "gone the extra mile" to deliver special customer service.

Unit aim(s)	This unit is about the skills the learner needs to deal with their customer in person and face to face. When they are working with a customer in this way, good feelings about the way the learner looks and behaves can improve how their customer feels about the transaction and give them greater satisfaction. Whilst verbal communication is important, the learner focus on their customer and the relationship that is formed also depends on the non-verbal communication that takes place between them. The learner will have many opportunities to impress their customer and their behaviour in this situation can make all the difference to customer behaviour and the satisfaction that they feel.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Many organisations rely on dealing with incoming telephone calls as a key part of their customer service procedures. Customer expectations are high when calling organisations because they have had an opportunity to prepare for their call. In addition, a proportion of calls start with customers in a negative frame of mind because the caller sees making a call as a way of dealing with a customer service problem. This unit is about being prepared to deal effectively with calls and using effective communication to satisfy customers with the outcome of each call.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Many customer service jobs involve contacting customers by telephone. Making an effective telephone call involves some very specific actions and should not be seen as a casual activity. By making a call to a customer the learner will have the opportunity to prepare and is therefore more likely to be able to lead the conversation in the direction they want it to go. This unit is about planning and making calls to customers in a way that contributes positively to the organisation's customer service.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Some customer service delivery involves communicating with a customer in a way that creates a permanent record either in writing or electronically. This form of communication carries risks and implications that are less likely to apply to a conversation held with a customer face to face or on the telephone. This unit is all about how written or electronic communication can be made effective and can contribute to excellent customer service.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Customer service contributes to an organisation's competitive position. Customers of many organisations have choice about the services or products they use and who supplies them. Often the technical features and cost of the service or product are almost identical. If this is the case, the quality of the customer service offered makes all the difference about which supplier the customer chooses. This unit is about how the learner can play their part in ensuring that their organisation makes the best possible use of the competitive advantage that can be gained from offering superior customer service. It covers how the learner can use customer service as a tool to compete effectively with other providers of similar services and products. The unit is not for a learner whose organisation does not compete actively with others.

Unit aim(s)	Effective and improving customer service may make use of a customer service knowledge set. This information base is built up continuously as the organisation learns from interaction with its customers. A knowledge set may contain a wide variety of information about customers and their transactions with the organisation. It will, in any case, rely on the actions of the learner and their colleagues in direct contact with customers to build and grow as a useful customer service tool. This unit is all about actions the learner takes to add to the information set and how they use it to develop the way they deal with customer transactions. This unit is for a learner only if their organisation has a systematic and technology supported approach to building a customer information set.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Staff with high levels of responsibility for customer service have an important role to play as champions of excellent service within their organisations. They should also promote customer service to service partners without whom their organisation cannot deliver reliable and excellent customer service. They need to have a great deal of knowledge and expertise from which others can benefit. This unit is about acting as a champion – being constantly alert for issues that affect customer service, analysing these issues and their implications, challenging on behalf of the customer and passing on any knowledge and expertise to others.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Environmental awareness and positive action form an important aspect of strategy for many organisations. Customer service may impact on environmental performance by demanding additional resources. Environmental policies may impact on customer service by placing restrictions on how it can be delivered. Periodically, the link between customer service and environmentalism needs to be reviewed so that appropriate changes may be made. Environmental and sustainability awareness must be encouraged constantly so that staff, suppliers, customers and other stakeholders are reminded of their contributions and responsibilities. This unit is appropriate for a learner whose job involves responsibility for customer service and sufficient authority to review and promote environmental matters in their organisation or in some part of it.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	The customer service that the learner's organisation gives is affected by the way they do their job. Whatever job the learner is doing, customers expect them to do it properly. They also expect the learner to consider their wishes and feelings while they are doing it. Doing their job properly involves following procedures and doing the tasks in their job correctly as well as having the appropriate relationship with customers. This Unit covers how the learner does their job with their customer in mind in a way that the organisation and supervisors find acceptable. It will help the learner to understand the parts of their job that are most important to good customer service.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	This Unit is about how the learner delivers consistent and reliable service to customers. As well as being good with people, the learner needs to work with their organisation's service systems to meet or exceed customer expectations. In the learners' job there will be many examples of how they combine their approach and behaviour with their organisation's systems. The learner will need to prepare for each transaction with a customer, deal with different types of customers in different circumstances and check that what they have done has met customer expectations. To meet this standard they have to deliver excellent customer service over and over again.

Unit aim(s)	Many organisations deliver a service to their customers on the customer's own premises. This requires sensitive handling as people are particularly protective about their own personal space. In this situation there is always the potential to detract from excellent customer service by using inappropriate language or behaviour or even by causing accidental damage to customer's property. This unit is about the process of providing a service on customer premises whilst ensuring that the customer both enjoys the customer service experience and has confidence that the work carried out has been completed successfully. This unit is not simply about working in a different building. The learner's customer must be somebody who feels real ownership of the premises and is therefore somewhat protective about them. In particular, this unit is for the learner whose job takes them into their customers' homes.

Unit aim(s)	Many customer service situations involve dealing with diverse groups of people inclusively and with respect. Responses to diversity can lead to discrimination that might or might not be deliberate. Discrimination can result from simply not knowing the beliefs and preferences of different groups or may result from actions based on stereotyping rather than on solid evidence obtained from the customer. This unit is about how the learner can establish their customer's expectations and needs in a way that takes full account of them as an individual. The unit also covers the way the learner provides customer service to diverse groups of customers each of which has common likes and dislikes.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Customer service is frequently delivered across a language divide. Customer service centres may be located in one country but deal mainly with another. In a multi-cultural society many customers may have a different first language from those delivering customer service to them. This language divide can present a real challenge to those who deliver customer service. This unit is about preparing to deliver customer service across a language divide and seeing through that delivery. The unit covers the steps that are needed to deal with customers with different language preferences without having full access to the learner's customer's first language. The learner should choose this unit if they frequently deal across a language divide. The learner should not choose this unit if they come across customers who do not share their first language only occasionally.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Customer service is often delivered using bespoke software when dealing with customers face-to-face, by telephone or on-line. For the process to be effective, the learner must be able to navigate the system quickly and directly following recommended routes and using all the functionality of the system. Customers are unaware of the details of the system they are using and they must be kept informed of the different steps the learner is taking. The use of the system must also ensure that the learner keeps appropriate records of the transaction so that it can proceed successfully through the next stages. Most of all, customer satisfaction must drive the interaction and it should not appear to be dominated by the demands of the software. This unit is for a learner who is responsible for delivering service to customers at the same time as operating bespoke service software.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Customer service delivery in a team involves many situations when the learner is unable to see actions through and they pass on responsibility to a colleague. This sharing of responsibility should be organised and follow a recognised pattern. Most of all the learner needs to be sure that, when responsibility is passed on, the actions are seen through. This involves routinely checking with their colleagues that customer service actions have been completed. This unit is for a learner whose job involves service delivery as part of a team and who regularly passes on responsibility for completion of a customer service action to a colleague.

Additional information about the unit
Unit aim(s)	Excellent customer service relies on teamwork. In many situations, successful delivery of service to end user customers relies on a complete service chain of internal or external customers and internal or external suppliers. For this to work, a series of service partnerships must be formed which will enable the chain to work efficiently and effectively. This unit is all about how to work effectively within a service chain and how to develop the links that cement key relationships. Effective communication and understanding of the roles of different organisations, departments and individuals are central to this area of the learner's work.

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	People managing customer service need to know how effectively it is being delivered. Without this information, they have no way of knowing if their customers are satisfied and are likely to remain loyal. They also need to know what to do to improve customer service to meet and exceed customer expectations. This unit is about planning how the learner can measure standards of customer service by collecting and analysing information. The learner must develop conclusions and recommendations and then report their findings to relevant people. Most of all, this unit is about approaching the review of customer service quality systematically and making full use of the findings.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Building and developing effective customer relations is a vital aspect of customer service. Strong customer relations will help the learners' organisation to identify and understand their customers' expectations, encourage a way of working that is based on partnership and mutual trust, and establish and maintain customer loyalty. This unit is about establishing and maintaining such relations. For some organisations this means encouraging loyalty and repeat business from large numbers of customers. For others it is all about nurturing and relating to a smaller number of valued customers who make an important strategic contribution to the organisation's success. This unit is for the learner only if they are in a position to influence the way their organisation determines the level of service offered to different customers.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	Excellent customer service is a team effort. The learner cannot win and maintain the loyalty of customers without pulling together with all the other staff who help to organise the delivery of services or products, interface with the customer or provide back-up to customer service activities. The team probably includes colleagues, senior managers and service partners who are working in other departments or outside organisations but still contribute to customer service delivery. To achieve the organisation's aims and objectives for customer service the learner will need to have effective working relationships with all of these – especially when they urgently need their co-operation and support.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	No matter how good the learner is at providing consistent and reliable customer service, some of their customers will from time to time expect more. They can signal this in various ways and when they do the learner must know how to handle it. Sometimes customers ask different questions and request special treatment. The learner may be able to help them and they certainly need to know who to ask for help if necessary. Some customers may be dissatisfied with the service and may present a problem. The learner's job is to recognise that there is a problem and make sure that the appropriate person deals with it.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	However good the customer service of the learners' organisation is, some problems will occur. Learners may not have the authority or experience to deal with the problem by themselves so it is important to collect helpful information for those who will deal with it. The learner will need to be able to identify that there is a problem, discover detailed information about that problem and pass on the information so that the problem can be tackled. This unit is about how to collect information about a customer service problem, pass it to the right people in the organisation and keep the customer informed about what is being done.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	This unit is about what to do when it is difficult to meet customer expectations. Even if the service the learner gives is excellent, some customers experience problems. Part of the learner's job is to help to resolve those problems. There is likely to be a problem if customer expectations are not met. This may be because the customer's expectations involve more than the learner can offer or because service procedures have not been followed. Some problems are reported by customers and sometimes the learner will spot the problem first and resolve it before their customer has even noticed. As soon as the learner is aware of a problem, they need to consider the options and then choose a way to put it right. This unit is particularly important in customer service because many customers judge how good the customer service of the organisation is by the way problems are handled.

Unit aim(s)	Many organisations have a significant proportion of difficult customers. The customer's attitude may be difficult simply because they believe that a threat or problem exists before they contact the organisation. They may become difficult or even aggressive when they discover that their expectations are

	not going to be met by the organisation. They may be very concerned or nervous about the outcome of dealing with the organisation. In either case, they are difficult to deal with and need the learners' understanding. This unit is about dealing directly with these customers and trying to reach a resolution that satisfies everybody or at least reduces the risk of dissatisfaction. The learner should choose this unit only if they recognise the content as applying to a reasonable proportion of their exchanges with customers. Do not choose this unit if it will be hard to find evidence because the learner only occasionally deals with a difficult customer.

Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	This unit is about how formal or informal risk assessment techniques can be used to reduce any risks involved in the provision of customer service. The provision of customer service involves a range of risks. These may be financial, reputational or health and safety risks. Awareness of them alone is rarely enough so customer service sometimes involves identifying and assessing individual risks so that they can be classified and prioritised. This in turn enables the learner to take actions to minimise risks.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	However effectively customer service is organised, customers make complaints from time to time. In some organisations, it is simply a matter of procedure for all complaints to be handled by particular people. Sometimes, front-line staff or supervisors can deal with these complaints, however, often more senior staff must deal with the complaint. This is either because of the severity of the complaint and its implications for the organisation, or because the customer will accept the solution only if it is dealt with at a senior level. This may require someone with the authority and influence to adapt existing policies and procedures to find an acceptable solution. It is also important for this person to explore patterns and trends in significant complaints and recommend changes to policies and procedures to avoid repetition.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	When the learner deals with their customers regularly, they want to make each occasion a good customer experience. The impression the learner creates and the way the service is delivered affects this in just the same way as when they deal with a customer only once. However, a longer-term relationship with a repeat customer also depends on building up their customer's confidence in the service that the learner offers. Loyalty and a long-term relationship rely on the customer having a realistic view of the organisation's service and being comfortable with it. The learner's customer will return to their organisation if they feel confident that they will receive excellent service because they have enjoyed good customer experiences with the learner before.

Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	Organisations change the way they deliver service to their customers because customer expectations rise and because other organisations improve the services they offer. Often the most important ideas about how to improve customer service come from people dealing directly with customers. The learner's job involves delivering customer service. If the organisation has decided to make changes, it is the learner's job to support them and to present them positively to customers. Also, by listening to customer comments the learner may have their own ideas about how the service they deliver could be improved. This unit is about how the learner provides support for changes that their organisation has introduced. In addition, it covers how the learner presents their own ideas for improvements to someone in their organisation who can authorise trying out the change.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	Many organisations develop their customer service by directing customers towards on-line services. Customer service delivered on-line leaves a customer isolated and reliant on screen routes and instructions. A customer may seek help face to face or by telephone. That help will involve the learner in understanding what the customer is trying to achieve, how the system allows for that and what point they have reached in terms of finding the right route. Difficulties can arise if the system fails or if the learner's customer is unable to discover how it can deliver what they want. This unit is for the learner if one part of their job involves helping customers to find their way through on-line systems.

Unit aim(s)	In customer service roles it is often useful to have a 'buddy' relationship with somebody who has more experience of the same customer service situation. If someone is asked to buddy a colleague who is learning customer service aspects of their job, they will need to approach that responsibility in an organised way. This unit is about how to be a good buddy by working alongside their colleague and providing them with constructive feedback and support. Someone does not need to be more senior than their colleague or their supervisor to act as a customer service buddy.

Unit aim(s)	Many organisations develop their customer service by directing customers towards self-service equipment which is operated by the customer alone. Regular customers become familiar with how that equipment operates and some will feel uncomfortable about being offered further help. Others may be learning about the use of the equipment for the first time or may be experiencing particular problems. Sometimes equipment fails and authorised intervention will be needed to clear it. Whichever is the case, the learner must be able to recognise what help and intervention is needed and to provide that in a way that pleases their customer and builds their confidence in the use of the equipment. This unit is right for the learner if any part of their job involves helping and encouraging customers to operate self-service equipment in order to improve their customer experience.

Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	Teamwork is a key component of delivering and improving excellent customer service. The people the learner works with to improve customer service may include one or more of the following: team members; colleagues; suppliers; service partners; supervisors; managers; team leaders. The delivery of excellent customer service depends on their skills and those of others. It involves communicating with each other and agreeing how they can work together to give a more effective service. They all need to work together positively. The learner must also monitor their own and the team's performance and change the way they do things if that improves customer service. This unit is about how the learner develops a relationship with others to improve their customer service performance.

Additional information about the unit

Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	This Unit is about taking responsibility for continuously developing the learner's own customer service skills and passing those skills on to others. It is about helping themselves and others to learn and grow in their customer service roles. The learner may not be a manager or a supervisor but they may be responsible for showing others how things work and what they need to do. For example, a new member of staff may need an introduction to the products, services, systems or procedures of their organisation and the learner may be asked to show them. Or the learner may need to coach someone from another department who has been transferred. Also, there may be the introduction of a new product, service, system or procedure that the learner is asked to learn about and present or demonstrate to others. This unit will help the learner to put 'showing others' into a formal framework that will help them to learn and improve their own coaching skills. The delivery of excellent customer service depends on the learner's skills and the skills of those around them.

Additional information about the unit
Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	Customer service can be improved only if the learner is fully aware of customer wishes and expectations. The learner can discover much of this information by seeking structured feedback from their customers about the customer's experiences of the learner's services or products. When the information has been collected it must be analysed and interpreted in order to use it for making customer service improvements. This unit is about how the learner collects that feedback and prepares it for use in the improvement of customer service.

Unit aim(s)	The quality of customer service transactions must be monitored if they are to benefit from actions to improve that overall quality. Quality in this area can be defined only in terms of agreed criteria and against agreed performance ratings. In an organisation that carries out a high volume

	of customer service transactions delivered face-to-face, by telephone or on-line, quality can be measured and improved only by adopting a systematic sampling approach. Spot checks and routine checks are needed to observe individual performance and results must be analysed to identify patterns and trends. Improvement can then occur as a result of feedback the learner gives to colleagues so that actions to improve individual performance can be taken. This unit is for the learner if one of their job responsibilities involves systematically sampling the quality of customer service transactions and working with colleagues to improve their performance.

Unit aim(s)	Achieving excellent customer service depends on the skills and knowledge of the staff who provide it. To be effective, organisations need to review constantly how effective their customer service is and what improvements should be made. Sometimes customer service improvements will depend on the development of staff skills. New staff must be brought to the required standards of skills and knowledge and established staff need to be updated on new procedures and techniques or refreshed on existing ones. Senior customer service staff have an important contribution to make to this process. This unit is about identifying what development and training is needed for staff, organising its delivery and monitoring its success.

Unit aim(s)	If organisations want to be consistently successful in customer service over a period of time, they need a customer service strategy. Managers and other senior staff can contribute to this through their knowledge of the organisation's customers and their expertise in customer service. This contribution is also based on what they know of other organisations and published research into trends in customer service. This unit does not assume the learner has full responsibility for their organisation's customer service strategy but that the learner takes a major role in the development of strategy for a particular part of their organisation.

Unit aim(s)	This unit is about the competences involved in managing a customer service award programme. A customer service award programme can make a valuable contribution to the organisation's customer service strategy. It serves the dual role of motivating team members and displaying to customers the learner's commitment to customer service. Whilst such a programme must be managed like any other management project, its dual purpose means that each management action associated with it must take full account of the strategic customer service implications.

Unit aim(s)	Customer service changes and improves sometimes through the application of technology or other resources as much as through changes in behaviour of those delivering the service. Whilst these changes can bring real benefits they inevitably come at an initial cost which must be taken into consideration. This unit is about the process of managing the application of technology or other resources to a customer service process. It involves a systematic approach to considering and evaluating options, implementing the most appropriate and reviewing the results.

Owner's Reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010-2014
Unit aim(s)	From time to time, a customer process must be subject to review. Most of all, this is because both customer expectations and the general environment change. In addition to this, features of the process evolve as it is operated and the customer service purpose of various details can be lost. This unit is about a systematic approach to reviewing and re-engineering a customer service process. The review seeks a balance of customer satisfaction, cost awareness and compliance with regulation. The review must be undertaken with the agreement and support of those with authority to make changes. It must also take account of the views of those who deliver the process and are in direct contact with customers. This unit is for the learner if they are responsible for reviewing customer service processes. Do not use this unit if the learner does not hold that responsibility and does not have the support of those with authority to make changes.

Unit aim(s)	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010. Customer service performance can be measured by a wide variety of metrics and ratings collected in different ways by different organisations. Those measurements are needed if the learner is to be able to manage performance systematically and take positive actions for improvement. Information on performance must be collected and interpreted in order to identify appropriate management actions to promote improvement. This may involve reference to standards, benchmarks, targets and tolerances and also the identification of trends and patterns in the evidence that is monitored. This unit is about those monitoring and management processes. This unit is for the learner if they have responsibility for the customer service performance of individuals or a team and they have the authority to see management actions through

Owner's reference	This Unit forms part of the Customer Service NVQ qualification 2010 - 2014.
Unit aim(s)	This unit covers the key principles of customer service that influence how it is managed and the links between management responsibilities and those key principles. The unit also recognises that knowledge and understanding of customer service principles and systems required in a management role may not be as detailed as that required in a delivery role. Instead, knowledge and understanding must relate clearly to a more strategic appreciation of the principles of customer service. This unit provides the opportunity to demonstrate the knowledge and understanding that is needed to be effective in customer service management.
